It appears that in her last effort to shove the earth down the river, the Joe B. Williams "bit off more"s shecould draw." She was on her way to New Orleans, with 40 coalboats and reached coalboats, grounded 13 more as and only had 10 left affoat. Pilots on passing boats say the Joe B. Williams was lying at Bass a dozen miles below Pt. Pleasant, when they passed, and that siphons were running on nearly all her barges. They also noticed a sunken barge at Riley's, one very nearly in the channel at Chrokee, and one at Echol's Crossing. One of the barges at Pt. Pleasant is entirely under water. The channel is very narrow there and has been filing up. Fog and the rapidly-falling Mississippi were the cause.
